Best Indian — Coriander, Voorhees:

Forget every negative stereotype clanging about your head regarding Indian food. No, its not all spicy. No, not all of it contains curry. And no, your stomach will not be viciously angry with you at two in the morning should you indulge. Indian Cuisine is as varied as the vast country from which it originates, and Coriander manages to cover all the bases. The menu (and staff for that matter) is about as intimidating as a baby dolphin and every attempt is made to make you feel comfortable in this somewhat niche culinary market. Start off with the Navrattan korma and some garlic naan. You'll never look back. N.D.
